North Solihull Primary Programme Colehill Heath Primary School

Colehill Heath Primary School will be moving from its current site in Marlene Croft, to the former Alcott Hall site, off Lime Grove and Walnut Close.

The new school is part of the North Solihull Partnership's regeneration programme which has seen £60 million invested in replacing or refurbishing all the primary schools in the North of the borough, alongside new developments in the village centres in Chelmond's Cross and Smith's Wood.

Planning permission for this project was granted in May 2013.

Contractors were invited to submit tenders for the work from the end of August 2013. Solihull Council received a number of responses from firms who were interested in getting the contract for building the school.

In February, Solihull Council's Cabinet met and agreed that the contract should be awarded to Morgan Sindall. This company will also build the new Fordbridge Primary School on the former Bennetts Well site.

The Council has used Morgan Sindall recently to build the new Bishop Wilson Primary School, which has been warmly received by pupils and parents alike.

Morgan Sindall is currently involved in pre-commencement works and will start towards the end of May/beginning of June this year.

Lime Grove will offer the employees of Morgan Sindall access to their site offices. The contractors have yet to confirm where deliveries to the site will be made.

The construction of the school is planned to take a year and the children should start, at the new Colehill Heath School building, in September 2015.

We will provide you with updates throughout the construction of the school. These will appear on the school website, the Council website, alongside articles in local newspapers and from local community groups.
